

THINK_SDGs online library

The THINK_SDGs online library is available at <http://ghptt.graduateinstitute.ch/documents>. The aim is to build a repository of documents to inform SDG implementation, and facilitate knowledge sharing between countries and regions to identify lessons learnt and best practices. Documents include:

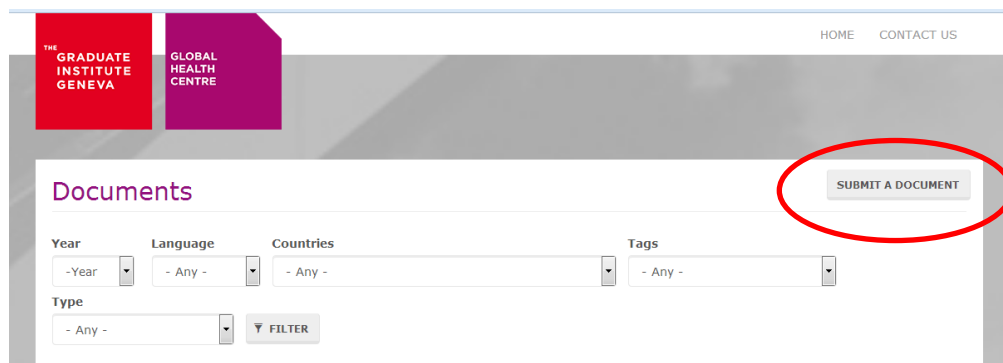

- Documents produced in the context of the THINK_SDGs initiative, including communication materials on the project, outcomes from the network’s meetings and consultations, and case studies.
- Documents produced by policy research institutions that are part of the THINK_SDGs network, such as policy research outcomes and policy recommendations.
- Third party documents as reference for SDG implementation and governance for health.

The library includes documents on a wide range of topics related to the health-related SDGs, with an emphasis on policy research on the political processes and institutional support needed to implement the SDGs. This includes the political determinants of health – with a focus on power dynamics across policy areas that affect health and wider issues of equity – and the role of different health stakeholders. As the SDGs link domestic policies to the global system in new ways, the thematic focus of THINK_SDGs is on systemic challenges that are intersectoral, globally interdependent, and beyond any single country’s capacity to solve.

More information on the focus of THINK_SDGs can be found here<sup>1</sup>.

Submission of documents:

Documents can be submitted by all THINK_SDGs network members through the “Submit a document” button at <http://ghptt.graduateinstitute.ch/documents>.

Documents in different formats – including academic articles, case studies, policy briefs, reports, and blog articles – can be submitted for inclusion in the online library. They can be published on the submitter’s website, be freely accessible on a third party website, or be submitted as pdf documents.

Documents that align with the general orientation of the THINK_SDGs initiative will be included in the online library, with possible edits to the meta-information provided.

Please note that the aim of this website is not to act as an editorial board or publisher, but rather to facilitate dissemination of policy research and promote access to knowledge on governance for health and the implementation of health-related SDGs.
